OFFICES-2, NORTHUMBERIAND-STREET, 5TRAND, LONDON, W.C. THE PALL MALL GAZETTE s a London evening paper, price twoprace, which was established in the year 1865 as an independent Liberal Newspaper and Review, and as such soon acquired a reputation as one of the leading organs of opinion in England. That its original character was Liberal as well as independent is sufficiently marked by the following announcement, which from its first issue and down to the present time has been published by way of advertisement to describe the objects and character of the paper, and which is of itself a sufficient reply to an idea which has obtained in some quarters that the PALL MALL GAZETTE own its position and success to its later extravagant advocacy of Jingolsen:—
"The PALL MALL GAZETTE also contains many original articles on Political and Social subjects, Review of Books, Criticisms upon the theatre, the opera, the Picture Exhibitions, &c., by independent and suthoritative writers. The City intelligence is made a great feature, and foreign correspondence appears in its pages."

Catholic hierarchy have taken on the Education question, there is great danger that a too exclusive regard to that que simply result in an anti-Catholic cry. Now, we should regard a general raid against Catholic candidates, and a determination to let no Catholic get into the Assembly, as a political misfortune. It is a very bad thing to have in the community an ostracised party-a party condemned to political extinction on the ground of their religious creed. We are not insensible to the difficulty of dealing with men who subordinate their citizenship to their churchmanship, and who vote, not according to their intelligence, and their individual conscience, but according to the dictates of priests who take their inspira-GUINNESS STOUT, BOTTLES BY JOHNSON organize themselves under consecrated who follow a word of command which anathe matizes the lawful national authority, make it very embarrassing to their Protestant fel-TRICKERY 18 MANIFOLD IN 118 PHASES.

All political economists assume that upon the average of years the exports of a country must pay for its imports. The difference is designated "the balance of trade," and when that balance is against any country for a considerable term of years such country is sup-posed to be retrograding in material wealth. From many representations of the trade of this colony, of the other colonies, and of the United In the working of our Constitutional sys-readers will perceive that this doctrine require often overlooked.

AMUSEMENTS. THEATRE ROYAL.

The interest in the production of Burnand's great Comedy, "The Turn of the Tide," by the distinguished artists known as the London Comedy Company, was evinced on Saturday might by one of those exceptionally large undiences which are ever welcome to actors and to managers. andiences which are ever welcome to actors and to managers, and which are rarely bestowed unless the entertainment is worthy of the patronage. That "tremendous houses" have been so frequent lately is proof of public content with, and of deserved patronage of, the company who, for the last wenty-three weeks in succession, have done much to raise the character of Australian theatrical representations by the completeness with which, even to the smallest details, every icce has been submitted to the public.

The minth comedy, in some respects, surpasses all others; the full strength of the company is necessary for the cast, the costumes of the ladies are many and very elegant, the phases of life and character are numerous and varied, and in the illustration of the locale of the several parts, Mr. George the illustration of the locale of the several parts, Mr. George Gordon has abundant scope for the lavish display of his artistic powers, a scope of which he has so fully availed himself that his previous efforts, excellent as they were, are eclipsed. The moment the curtain rises, the attention is arrested by the lovely picture, and through ten scenes the ever present feeling of the spectator is admiration for the artist's work. Too often scene-painting consists of extensive dauls, in which nature is outraged and burlesqued. Mr. Gordon uses highly cultivated art to depict nature as truly as possible in her natural colours and forms; and with a keen insight into the surroundings of life in divers grades of civilisation, he intuitively represents each chapter of the life history under action with an appropriate fidelity which lends additional charms to the conscientious efforts of the actors.

skeen miseght into the surroundings of life in divers grades of evillisation, he intuitively expressed as the hapter of the life history under action with an appropriate hidely which tends salitional charms to the conscientions efforts of the life history under action with an appropriate hidely which tends altitudinal charms to the conscientions efforts of the life. The lay is founded on the novel, "The Morals of Mayrierit", and the special of the latest interest of the latest of latest o M.P. (Mr. Edmund Marshail). From the Major the fact of Earnseliffe's separation is learned; Marguerite's one meeting at the opera is betrayed, and furnishes material for a letter to Dr. Mortimer, which is intended to break off the marriage. Lady Clara is also in Switzerland—is injured by a carriage accident, and dies almost in her husband's arms, imploring his forgiveness. The fourth act finds Marguerites in her Bretagne home, gradually recovering from a serious illness, Mrs. Danby and Georgy dividing the attendance on the invalid, with Manon (Miss Nellie Playfair), the old nurse. Dr. Mortimer arrives, exposes the baseness of the feusel Danby accusation, and learns from Marguerite that honour and duty combined are powerless to hanish the memory of her love for Philip, whose mame, as the Doctor had learned of their love, their sorrow, and Marguerite's infexible honour. The Danby ladies are expelled; the Doctor gracefully assures Marguerite that he returns to his position as guardian, and Philip opportunely appears to claim his bride. In this summary the names of the artists who plaved the characters will indicate the emotions called into play. For the present we pass from the merits of the actors, with which we are familiar, to the novelties provided by Mr. Gordon.

The opening scene—"The Old Chateau"—represents a semi-ruined castle in that most pituresque country, the north-western coast of France—the Manour de Keraniat, Western Brittany. A raised terreace overhangs the beach;

The opening scene—"The Old Chateau"—represents a semi-ruined castle in that most pictureque country, the north-western coast of France—the Manoir de Krazini, Western Brittany. A raised terrace overhangs the beach; around are gothle pillars and half-broken archways, over which the faithful ivy has grown as if tohide the ravages of time. In the doorway of the habitable portion sits the invalid, gazing over the blue sea, calm and bright in the sunlight of a spring afternoon, the pointed turrets of grey stone glistening in the sun's rays; along the beach the woods and venerable trees shade from too rough breezes the gardent from whose fragrant walks Manguerite enters, laden with the gay blossons of the early year. The beauty of the picture appealed to all. The dialogue was che-ked by the sounds of approval. As the actors retired, in place of an ordinary shifting scene, a second picture appeared—the sea from another point; in the right foreground the but of Père Blaisot (Mr. W. Farren, jun.) the ruins of the first act; within, beside the open chimney, on whose hearth the huge log glows with ruddy heat, sits the fair Marguerite; on the high mantel-shelf old bronzes and carvings tell of bygong greatness, of the heroes of old time; and so, in the hone which gave her birth, the malden finds her rest. The gorgeous dresses, the particulars of the dialogue, and the charm insparted to all by the excellent neiting, must be left for a second notice; aufflice it to say that the appreciation was equal to that bestowed upon the scopery. The principal characters were again and again resulted, and "The Turn of the Tide" promises to have as brilliant and deservedly successful, and even more protracted, career of public favour than any comedy which has preceded it.
